FYI. During the next allowable period, I would like to set up an additional plan to sell 200,000 shares when the price hits $50 again. I would like the plan to be in place for 1 year from signing. If the stock doesn't get back to $50 in the next year, then I'll file something else after this one elapses. With dividends and the stock options that will also trigger at $50, my holdings will be about 20 times my base pay so almost 3 times my ownership guidelines. It's time to start diversifying and making sure my family and family foundation are protected. Thanks.

I don't think it's necessary to inform the full board and it's certainly prudent planning to diversify. I think I'll window opens up at the end of the month as ability to buy I checked with Ebony today. PS Cindy's dad did pass away this afternoon I'll be in touch tomorrow.

Don, Jim,

I met with my financial advisors yesterday (virtually). I am planning to enter into a 10b5-1 plan to sell some stock hopefully sometime later this year. I plan to trigger the sale when the stock gets back to $50. I will remain at all must 3 times my share ownership requirement after the sale, about 20 times my salary. My ownership requirement is 7 times. I know we talked about this in the Compensation Committee but I just wanted to let you both know. If you think I should inform the entire Board, let me know. Thanks.
